Turks Torture Four Professors Engaged In American School

The Instructors of Armenians Horribly Treated Before Being Put to Deoth by Blood-Thirsty Turkish Horde

PULL OUT MAN'S FINGER NAILS BY ROOTS

Boston, Nov. 1. (By United Press)—Four professors of the Euphrates-American college founded by American missionaries at Harpoot, Armenia, were horribly tortured by the Turks before put to death, according to a letter made public here today by Rev. Robert R. Smith, of Westfield, Mass. he hair and mustache of one professor were pulled out by the roots. The nails of another were pulled out with pinchers. Seven-eighth of students were killed or exiled and the young girls were carried away to harems, the letter stated. The letter was written by an American connected with the college, ev. Smith asserted, and was addressed to Bishop Casparian of Boston, Mass. It is dated July 19, 1915, but the name of the writer is withheld. Fourteen professors were engaged in instructing 150 Armenian students, two-thirds of which were girls, in American ideas, when the war broke out, it was said. The Turks took over seven of the buildings of the school. Seven principal native professors educated in America were taken from the college, according to the writer. Four were killed, three are still living.

DRASTIC MEAT INSPECTION RULES GO INTO FORCE TODAY

Washington, Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—New and drastic meat inspection rules, for protection of the American stomach, are in effect today. Their operation began officially, yesterday, but packing houses and abattoirs were not affected until today.

Destruction of diseased animals by U. S. meat inspectors before they enter the slaughter house is one of the new rules. Heretofore effected animals were slaughtered on the same killing floors with healthy animals and were not condemned until later.

Violation of the meat inspection laws is made punishable by a new penalty of withdrawal of government inspection, putting forth the offending concern out of interstate commerce.

A new rule in favor of the packers is that permitting them to sell "second class" cooked meat, providing it is so labeled after sterilization. Sale of raw pork in summer sausage and other forms for eating without cooking is prohibited.

Drastic new sanitary regulations for slaughter houses is another feature of the new regulations in effect today.

SERBIANS CAUGHT IN TRAP BETWEEN ADVANCING ARMIES

Plight of Main Force Considered Precarious---Extermination Considered Possible

Germans, Bulgarians and Austrians Directing Strong Forces Against Withering Serb Army.

London, Nov. 1. (By United Press)—Serbian plight was growing rapidly worse today. The Germans were 50 miles south of the Danube in places. Austrians driving east from the direction of Vicegrad were making some progress, thought hampered by the Montenegrans who hung on their right flank. Bulgarians were already in force along the east and west line from their frontier to the Nish-Salonika railroad in the Veles and Uskub region. In smaller numbers this line extended to the west of the railroad with scouts, according to shome accounts on the frontier. This front the Bulgarians were trying to strengthen so as effectually to cut the Serbian army in two. From the northwest the Germans were directing a fierce drive against Krayujevac, site of the Serbian big arsenal 60 miles a little to the east of South Belgrade.

Voters of All Parties Favor The Republican Ticket

Hundreds of voters in Clearfield county who normally vote another ticket have indicated their intention to support the Republican ticket at the election tomorrow. This is particularly true of those independent citizens who owe allegiance to no party, and who habitually cast their ballot for the best man. Their vote will be solid for the Republican candidates, because the men on that ticket are clean and capable, and worthy of their support.

Indeed, personal fitness might well have been made the slogan of the campaign this year, for each individual candidate can honestly declare that he is fit, mentally and morally, for the office for which he is running.

Al Kline, who heads the ticket, it one of the most lovable men in the world. He is exactly the kind of a man that men tie to and swear by. His political opponents have on occasion sought to use against him the fact that he is not brilliantly educated. Well, sticking to that text, no brilliant educational attainments are required for the office of county treasurer, and if Kline is never the recepient of an honorary degree, he has all the learning required for the job—and more. Of ineffably more importance is this fact: Al Kline is honest clean down to the ground—an inherent qualification which no amount of schooling will give a man.

Ed. B. Chase has been in business in Clearfield all his life, and has earned a reputation for sterling integrity and efficiency which stands him in good stead in the present campaign His record has been gone over with a fine-tooth comb, but his political enemies have been unable to find a single thing in it which might disqualify him for the office of register and recorder. Indeed, an eleventh-hour attack on the whole Chase connection was the only weapon used against him in the campaign, and that was both scurrilous and false.

When a man has an official record for his friends and enemies to scan, he doesn't need to go very far behind that. Every man in the county knows John H. Moore's record as prothonotary, just as they know that John H. Moore is an honorable and capable gentleman. He has asked for a second term on personal fitness, and there is not the least doubt in the world that he will be given it.

Dale and Spencer measure up in fitness for the office of county commissioner heads and shoulders above their opponents. Both are trained business men, and if elected will give the county a business administration not unmixed with intelligence.

John M. Bain and T. E. Moore, candidates for county auditor, are both trained men. They know what an audit means, and how to audit. Theirs will be the duty to prevent wasteful expenditures of the county's money by exercising watchful care over the accounts of the disbursing officers. It is no child's play, and these men will fully serve the interests of the county if elected.

There you have it. There is not a single man on the ticket who is not worthy in every particular of the confidence you will show in him. These men were selected from the long list of candidates in the September primaries. The Republican party vouches for them, as did the individual voters in the primaries, and it is clearly the duty of every Republican voter to go to the polls tomorrow and pile up a big majority for them.

WILL EUGENIA KELLY WED?

New York, Nov. 1.—Will Eugenia Kelly, daughter and heiress of the late Eugene Kelly, the millionaire banker, become the wife of Al Davis, cabaret dancer and entertainer? This is the question that now seems uppermost in the minds of the habitues of Broadway restaurants and other resorts in the white light district where both Miss Kelly and Mr. Davis are well known. This is the day that Mr. Davis's divorce from his wife becomes effective and the first day that he is legally free to make Miss Kelly his bride. According to a report published late in August, Miss Kelly was quoted as saying that she intended to marry Mr. Davis. Later she denied this. Friends of the couple, notwithstanding this denial, believe their marriage will take place at an early date, notwithstanding any obstacles that may be placed in their way by Miss Kelly's mother, who once had her daughter arraigned in police court in an effort to break off her friendship with the cabaret dancer.

ANDERSON CREEK HILL SCENE OF SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Ralph Jordan and Two Sons Narrowly Escape Death Saturday Afternoon

Motorcycle Becomes Uncontrolable and Plunges Over Embankment—Mr. Jordan in Hospital Suffering From Bruises—Two Sons Badly Injured.

Ralph Jordan and two sons, Randolph and Chancey, had a narrow escape from serious injury and probably death Saturday afternoon about 4:30, when Mr. Jordan lost control of the motorcycle in which they were riding, causing it to leave the road and plunge through a board fence and over an embankment.

Mr. Jordan and two sons left Clearfield about 3:30 and while coming down the Anderson Creek hill on their way home the brake broke resulting in the accident. There were two alternatives for stopping the machine open to Mr. Jordan. One to run it into the bank at the side of the road and the other to take a chance on clearing the curve at the foot of the hill. On account of the children he chose the second but while crossing the railroad near the foot of the hill, the front wheel swerved, causing the machine to go over the embankment.

Mr. Jordan was badly injured, having the first point of one of his fingers broken and the bone piercing the palm of his hand. He was immediately taken to the hospital where 1500 units of antitoxin were given him, the doctors being afraid lock jaw would set in as a result of the bone being exposed to the air so long. He was also injured in his hip, back and side, but is resting as well as can be expected today.

Chauncey, the older son, was badly bruised about the face and hip and is complaining of pains in his chest and stomach. It is not known yet whether he is injured internally. The other boy was bruised about the face but is able to be around today

LEE RECEPTION SATURDAY A MOST BRILLIANT AFFAIR

Miss Marian Bigler and Mrs. Moore Guests of Honor—Many Out of Town Guests Present

One of the largest and most fashionable social affairs of the season was held at the home of A. W. Lee, Sr., Saturday, from 3 to 7 o'clock, when Miss Mary Lee, Miss Ella Goodfellow and Mrs. Asbury Lee, Jr., entertained more than 200 guests at a reception in honor of Miss Marian Bigler, whose wedding will take place on the tenth of this month, and Mrs. August L. Moore, who was formerly Miss Lillie Lee.

The house was most artistically decorated in autumn leaves, bitter sweet berries, laurel, yellow chrysanthemums and jack-o-lanterns. The color scheme which was carried throughout the entire house was yellow and undoubtedly the decorations were the most beautiful which were ever displayed in Clearfield. Thayer's orchestra from the Susquehanna College of Music furnished delightful music during the entire afternoon and evening. Delicious refreshments were served by the ladies of the Episcopal Gild.

The out of town guests who were present were:

Mrs. A. E. Patton, Mrs. C. S. Russell, Mrs. Chas. E. Patton, Mrs. William C Helmbold, Mrs. Augustus Wolfe, Mrs. Roland D. France Admits She Has Shot 2 Women Arrested As Spies

Denies That Either Case Is Similar to Murder of Miss Cavell, as Victims Were Caught At Espionage

RECORDS IN CASE SHOWN TO U. P. MAN

Paris Nov. 1. (By United Press.)—France makes no secret of the fact that she executed two women spies. As stated in a cable Saturday the two incidents have been refused discussion by the French government from the standpoint of comparison with the Edith Cavell affair.

The French government freely places before the United Press the records in both cases giving full authority to publish them. They bear no similarity to the Cavell incidents, according to the French records in which the prisoner was accused only of helping French and Belgians of military age to escape from German jurisdiction and not with any act of espionage.

The women executed by the French were found guilty as spies. Their names are Ottile Boff and Arguerite Schmidt.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE MOST IMPORTANT ISSUE TOMORROW

Five Good Reasons "WHY WOMEN SHOULD VOTE" Are Given Below

A great question is being discussed
While wispy gray faded hair is
Shall women vote or not?
I think they should.

First: Because you will find a great many more educated women in Pennsylvania than educated men. In almost any High school in Pennsylvania you will find more girls than boys.

Second: As women must obey the laws just as men do, should they not have a say in electing the men who make the laws?

Third: Would men be satisfied if only women chose the officials who were to regulate their business? Of course they wouldn't, so why are the in Pennsylvania at the present time. only men regulate their business?

Fourth: If a man is willing to trust a woman with his name and money surely he is willing to trust her with the vote.

Fifth: Men say that women have nothing to do with war. It is only just to give women a voice in the government and in the councils that make or prevent war. Who love and work to rear the sons who are then killed in battle? Who must suffer agony for every soldier killed? WOMEN! They suffer not only mentally but often physically as well.

Sixth: Is it not significant that no attempt is being made in any equal-suffrage state to take away the vote from women FOUR MILLION women vote in THIRTEEN equal-suffrage states why can't Pennsylvania be the FOURTEENTH?

Seventh: Men say that women will neglect their homes and children if they vote. Women aren't any more likely to neglect their homes and children than men are to neglect their business.

I think the real objections to women having the vote are founded purely on prejudice. SURELY NOT ON REASON.

"If you think she knows as much,
As the steerage Turk and such,
Let her vote.
If you think she has a mind
Equal to the Turkish kind
Let her vote.
If you think she's earned the right
That you grant without a fight
To the Servian bedlamite
Let her vote.

If you think she is as good
As the burglar brotherhood,
Let her vote.
If she's more deserving than
Any bum or hold-up man,
Let her vote.
You don't bar out the thug,
Or the Anarchiatic bug,
Or the gin-mill ugly mug,
Let her vote.

If you think that she is just,
And is worthy of the trust,
Let her vote.
If you think her heart beats true
For the right, its up to you—
Let her vote.
If you think she's earned her way,
Don't be stingy with the pay,
Let her have her little say,
Let her vote.

CLEAFIELD HIGH LOSES TO STATE COLLEGE HIGH

Came Very Disheartening to Coaches —Team Shows Poor Form and Head Work

The football game Saturday afternoon in which Clearfield was beaten by State College by a score of 13-0 was very disheartening to the Clearfield coaches and rooters. There are no excuses to offer except that the team had on off day all around. They lacked pep, fighting spirit and aggressiveness, and on the whole showed very poor head work and form.

The season will reach it's climax next Saturday when the team goes to DuBois to play their old rivals. The game will decide whether the season is a success or a total failure. Although at home the team shows real form and science, they fall down when playing on some foreign field as was shown in Saturday's game.

State College made their first touchdown by straight football, carrying the ball over through the line, but the second one was on a fumble by Clearfield. State College kicked from their 60 yard line to West who fumbled the ball and a State College man recovered it and crossed the line for their second tally.

Twice during the first quarter, Clearfield was within the ten yard line but lacked the punch to shove the ball over. After these two failures the team became discouraged and lost their pep and fighting spirit and accepted their doom.

MONDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 1, 1915

Tomorrow's duty is plain to all good Republicans and Progressives. Vote the ticket straight. Don't be a "plunker."

Getting near to hog killing time again. We suggest taking the finger prints of the porkers at the county home.

The fifty dollar appropriation for licking the editor seems to have been expended on booze as a preliminary to the grand event.

That champeen hen of the North American's, Lady Eglantine, need never bother herself about cackling. Every time she lays an egg, the old N. A. tells the whole world about it.

The Reed attack on the Chase family has lost Dick many a Democratic vote which ordinarily would have been cast for him. A vote for Chase for register and recorder will not only help to put a good man into office, but will rebuke unfair campaign methods.

It does not seem odd that local Democratic papers seek to create the impression that there is a "split" in the county Republican organization. A party so completely wrecked as the local Democracy must have some comfort even if it is gained by giving currency to falsehoods.

It is plainly up to Clearfield to make the latest effort of the Women's Club a success. The town has been begging for a rest room for the benefit of out of town shoppers and visitors. Now it has one, thanks to the willingness of the ladies to "take a chance," and it is the duty of the town to make it a success.

Bob Mason is on the job again to save the Republican party from the demnition-bow-wows. Bob's got his pencil all sharpened up, and is prepared to record each and every vote that he hears about. Incidentally Bob wants The Progress to say that he knows no more about the other two pigs than he did about the two he was supposed to have swiped.

All that is necessary to send the whole Republican ticket under the wire is for all Republicans to go to the polls tomorrow and vote the straight ticket. Conditions were never better for a complete victory, and every man should feel it a duty to cast his vote without permitting petty personalities to influence him. The ticket is good as it stands, and is worthy of full support.

We commend the Bowman advertisement on this page to the thoughtful attention of Progress readers. Its effrontery is strictly in keeping with the brazen attempt of Mr. Bowman to pursuade the voters that his record entitles him to another whack at the county commissionership. If he is judged solely upon his record as a commissioner, he will not poll enough votes to get himself into the official count.

Thankfully, the women of the state are not going to be disappointed because a few rum-soaks and traffickers in vice oppose their efforts to secure the franchise. Nobody expects that class to support woman suffrage, but there are enough clear headed men in Pennsylvania to make Amendment No. 1 a law tomorrow. Vote for suffrage. It is the cleanest opportunity you ever had to go on record for progress.

GLASS WORKERS GET MORE PAY.

Kane, Pa., Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—Scores of window glass plants, shut down for months, were to reopen in Western Pennsylvania today on completion of wage negotiations. Five thousand employes will receive increased pay.

YALE NOW IN "DRY" COLUMN.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 1.—Yale University has been put in the "dry" column by a new law which was put into effect today, and which absolutely prohibits the clubs and fraternities at the university from serving alcoholic beverabes to their members. The reason for this is that many of the members of the clubs are minors and the law forbids the selling of liquor where minors congregate.

MORE "PREPAREDNESS."

Washington, Nov. 1.—In pusuance of an order of the war department a board of cavalry officers met at the Army War College here today for the purpose of revising and bringing up to date the cavalry drill and service regulations of the United States army.

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

"Cyprus is one of the most important islands in the Mediterranean," says a bulletin given out today by the National Geographic Society, which describes England's reported offer to the Greeks for their aid in the world-war. "There are just two islands in the broad inland sea larger than Cyprus, and these are Sicily and Sardinia. There are few islands in the world more rich in historical associations, and none, probably, more coveted by a powerful neighbors.

"The island lies in the mouth of a formed by Asia Minor and Syria at the northeastern end of the Mediterranean, being about equally distant from the mainland to the north and to the east. It has an area of 3,584 square miles, or is as large as the states of Delaware and Rhode Island combined. Its greatest length is 141 miles and its greatest width is 60 miles, while its average width is more than 35 miles. A great part of the island is taken up by the two mountain ranges, one of which fills much of the southern and central part, and the other of which stretches along the northern coast.

"The coast of Asia Minor lies 40 miles to the north, and that of Syria between 50 and 55 miles to the east. Although nominally a possession of the Ottoman Empire up until the outbreak of hostilities between the Turks and the Allies, Cyprus has been administered by Great Britain since 1878, and now forms an integral part of the British Empire. English occupation has done much to improve the conditions of health on the island, as it has been a stimulus to commercial development.

"The mountains of the island are wild and beautiful, and upon their sides the forests are still growing that were famed and prized in early Egyptian times. They also contain the mines of copper, celebrated among the ancients and still richly productive. The highest altitude is attained by Mount Troodes, with a summit 6,406 feet above sea level.

"A wide valley runs, east and west, through the central part of the island. This valley is about 60 miles long, with a breath varying from 10 to 20 miles. The mountain ranges on either side send their waters to the valley through intermittent torrents. Much of this lowland is uncultivated, though in the northern parts grain is grown. The soil of the whole valley is good, and there is no reason why the uncertain water supply might not be supplemented, bringing all of the land under cultivation. In the days when western civilization was in its swaddling clothes, Cyprus was widely known for its impassable forests, which not only clothed the sides and summits of its mountains with thick, dark masses of green, but which overgrew the whole floor of the valley between with such an interlacing sturdy tangle of trees and underbrush, that it was difficult to clear the land for cultivation.

"The wonderful forests of the land, however, in the more than 2,000 of exploitation that have passed over them have been almost entirely cut away. These forests built the ships of Egypt, of Greek Syrian rulers, of Asia Minor cities, and of Turks, and all that remains of their once much-heralded glory are the pine growths on the mountains. Today the whole central plain is bare and treeless, and with the extinction of the forests many disadvantages of climate have come upon the island, so that Cyprus of the present is not the bright home for man so bravely praised by the Greeks of classic times. It is, nevertheless, a valuable land, and much of its former splendor could be brought back to it by the proper administration and development. The English have already begun this work of rehabilitation.

"The population of the island is estimated at 240,500, Greeks and Turks. The chief towns are Nicosia, the capital, with 15,000 inhabitants, the largest city, and Limasol and Larnaca. Most of the people gain their livelihoods by agriculture. The methods employed are almost as ancient as are the traditions of the islands, and the inhabitants are sturdily opposed to innovation. The olive, mulberry, grains, grapes and other fruits, oil seeds, cotton and all sorts of vegetables are grown. Irrigation works have been undertaken for the reclamation of the soil, so fruitful of old, and many acres have been brought back under cultivation. In passing, it may be stated, that the miles of Cyprus have found favor in all of Britain's wars since that waged against Russia in the Crimea.

"Cyprus does a annual trade of about $1,500,000. It is handicapped in the development of its commerce owing to a want of natural harbors and to an Eastern fatalism too thoroughly learned to permit of much initiative. Since the British occupation some energy has been brought into the little land, but there still remains a great deal to be accomplished before a west-Europa commerce and business management can become indigenous. Great Britain administers Cyprus through a high commissioner, with the powers of a colonial governor."

OFF YEAR ELECTION IS BEING HELD IN JERSEY.

Trenton, Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—Interest in the off year election in New Jersey which occurs tomorrow centers mainly in the fight for control of the next legislature, which on joint ballot will elect a state treasurer. A Democrat, Edward E. Grosscup, the present treasurer, is chairman of the state Democratic committee.

In the next legislature there will be the making and breaking of booms for governor and United States senator, offices which are to be filled in 1916.

WON'T TALK SUFFRAGE, PEACE OR RELIGION.

San Francisco, Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—Women of every race and creed; women of every walk of life, suffragists and antis, neutrals and belligerents, unfurled here today the banner of mutual tolerance.

Under the auspices of the International Congress of Women, these delegates from almost every land on the globe opened their six-day convention, under an iron-clad agreement not to talk suffrage, peace or religion. There was, however, plenty of talk.

Church women, Red Cross and charity workers, society women, modern clubwomen, foreign women were here. Pan-American day will be one of the big features of the congress. The women will try to establish more of an entente cordiale between the women of North and South America.

"We are going to see if we can not overcome prejudice between the Latin American and the Anglo-Saxon American," explained Mrs. F. H. Colburn, who is in charge. "We stare and bristle at each other ... quills on a porcupine. The Latin ... woman smokes, but does ... the streets without a chaperon. Anglo American woman (the most of her) does not smoke ... goes and comes where she ... Each hold their social ... aguinsst the other.

BATTLE STORIES TOLD BY THE MEN IN THE TRENCHES.

AFTER THE OVERTURE—THE BAYONET BALLET.

(By U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

London, Oct. 2.—(By Mail.)—"It was all right once the 'curtain was rung up'" said a wounded Tommy, formerly a call-boy in a London theater. "It was the all-night wait for the order to advance that I found most trying. The incessant thunder of the guns and the shrieking of the shells in the darkness overhead was a most nerve-racking overture to the big drama to come.

"It was my first real battle. I knew my part well enough after months of rehearsals in England, but I own I felt a trifle shaky, just like an actor on his first night. But it's strange how all this feeling passed away when some one cried, 'Ish kabibble, now's your chance!'

"My chum and I had agreed to stick together as long as we could, but no sooner did we clamber out of the trench than he went down. I seemed to go mad with rage at this. I hardly know what I did.

"Suddenly I lost all fear. I was carried along by an overwhelming impulse to get at the Germans and avenge my chum. Leaping over one, I rushed [illegible] dead bodies and barbed wire as though I was electrified. I was bowled over at the first trench. I remember plunging by bayonet into a huge German who confronted me with leveled rifle. Then I was hit on the head with something that made me see more fire than during all the time I had been out there.

"Next thing I knew the stretcher-bearer was telling me my wound was not very serious."

TOMMY HELPS A WOUNDED GERMAN.

London, Oct. 2.—(By Mail.)—The young corporal had lost his left arm at Loos. "But it was worth it," he observed from his bed in one of the London military hospitals. "You know, we had been waiting a long time for 'the day.' The night before the battle we had a little concert. One of our lads, made up as Lady Tipitz, sang 'I wouldn't leave the old canal for you.' Early next morning we were in the thick of it. We were like a menagerie let loose.

"One of our fellows did a wonderful thing. Set upon by a dozen Boches, one by one he knocked them all out. Then I saw him pick up a wounded German officer and [illegible] him across his shoulder. While carrying the officer he was hit. The blood poured from his head, but he staggered on with the German until he could lay him down in a place of safety.

"There were many similar acts of gallantry that day. ... bravest of all were our chaplains ... stuck right with the boys even when the fighting were fiercest. ... real pluck you couldn't beat our officers. Our young lieutenant ... me up when they got me. 'How did you get on, sir?' I asked him. ... how that he had copped a big ... shrapnel and that his left ... almost severed. 'Oh, just ... my boy, he replied."

OUR SON WAS KILLED ON THE MORNING OF SEPT. 25—"

(By U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

London, Oct. 2.—(By Mail.)—All accounts from the British front—correspondents' despatches, soldiers' letters, official reports—unite in the warmest praise of the gallantry of the English officers, especially the youngsters. The story of the death of Second Lieutenant Emanuel, of Belsize Park, as told in a letter to his mother from a fellow officer, is typical:

"Your son was killed on the morning of September 25 while supporting an attacks. He was magnificent. I heard the men talking of him among themselves. They say he was leading and chatting all the time, and did them a world of good. When the order came to go to the front line his platoon was the first to move. 'Hooray! we're going up, lads; come along,' he shouted. He led them all the way and got into the trench safely, but almost immediately afterwards he received a bullet in the chest.

"He was splendid to the last, and his farewell words were: 'Well done, oh, lads!' His example has been most inspiring to all of us."

CHAPTER LXIV.

Sachio and Michael.

The two rival capitals of these mated lands still faced one another in a conflict as yet undecided. Which were deeper in duplicity it had been difficult to say, but as to which surpassed in active measures no doubt still remained. Count Sachio, restless and energetic, already was taking further steps to enforce his own will and that of his sovereign upon the weaker mind which purported to govern at Gretzhoffen.

It was as Sachio had prophesied—the sloth of Michael left him open to any proposition which came couched in fair words and which offered no disturbing changes in his own personal plans. He acceded readily enough to the proposals of the Gretzhoffen courtier to lengthen the armistice between the two warring countries with a view to a formal and final peace. Readily enough also he admitted into his own household the archplotter of the forces of his hereditary enemy.

Unopposed, indeed invited, Sachio made his way much as he liked throughout the Gretzhoffen palace, with whose interior he already was more or less familiar. It was his plan in case of any challenge to refer to the royal ruler who was his host.

He paid special attention to that apartment where he had found the partially destroyed original script whose missing half he sought. Here, minutely, patiently, like a hound running a difficult trail, he went over the place inch by inch, seeking to find some trace which would lead him to his quarry.

But success did not attend his efforts, though these he prosecuted even in those portions of the palace where so recently he and his troops had faced death when the levels were flooded by waters turned in from the castle moats. He was willing to despair, and in fact had turned away with the intention of giving up the search, when he met a subofficer of the guard who proved difficult to handle in his usual easy fashion.

"Halt! Who goes there?" challenged this guard as he saw Sachio emerge from one of the lower chambers.

"A friend!" rejoined Sachio promptly, in military formula.

"Advance, friend, and give the countersign!" came the gruff command.

"The countersign?" said Sachio. "Ah, well, my friend, now that I think of it, I have not had it given to me. 'Twas my own neglect. But I am a friend of the king—'twas he who gave me permission to explore these portions of the palace. I was curious to see the operations of this system of defense by water—it was something new to me."

"That is all very well," rejoined the soldier, "but explanations of that sort are scarcely good enough."

"Take me, then, to the king himself," said Sachio.

"Why should I?" rejoined the other. "What business is it of yours to know about the lower levels of our palace? These are ticklish times, and there have been such things as spies."

"Spies!" exclaimed Sachio, virtuously. "I, a spy—is that what you mean, fellow? If so, I command you to carry me forthwith to the presence of the king himself. He knows me well, and you should have a care not to offend one who is under the king's protection."

The sheer audacity of this intruder had its effect, even upon the blunt soldier who had accosted him. Sachio was indeed taken to the presence of Michael, and there his bold prediction proved true—Michael reprimanded publicly the officer who had done his duty, and showed his public favor to the man who was indeed a spy, although not suspected of being one.

"What, fellow?" exclaimed the king to the soldier, when Sachio had made his explanations—"what do you mean by offering indignity to our friend and future ally in this fashion? Away with you, and do you report at the guardhouse under arrest. Your trial shall come later."

"My dear Sachio," resumed Michael, "you see how prompt we are with our protection of our friends? Do not take it ill of us that one of our underlings has done what his superior officers or his sovereign would never think of countenancing. We trust you will accept this disclaimer."

"It was nothing, your majesty," replied the wily statesman, "and I assure your majesty the incident shall not linger in my memory. May we perhaps venture to drown in a bumper to your majesty's good health all thought of this misunderstanding? I will drink to the health of Michael and the prosperity of his kingdom."

"Quite agreeable!" exclaimed Michael; "and let us follow that with another to the final and peaceful conclusion of that unhappy misunderstanding which has heretofore divided these two kingdoms."

They drank. The befuddled friends of Michael joined them in hilarity if not intelligent, at least vociferous.

"But, my good Sachio," resumed Michael after a time, "let me ask you a question. Yours was ever a keen eye for beauty, and a good scent on the trail of beauty itself. Tell me, then, what became of that beautiful young American who so lately was with us—and who, if you will allow me to say it, had so much to do with the late repulse of your forces? I have not seen her since that time—nor, now that I recall it, have I seen her friend, Count Frederick. They have been gone some days or hours. I cannot tell which measures their absence, whether clock or calendar, but I know she is not here, for every room of the palace has been searched for her, and she is not found."

"Your majesty," rejoined Sachio, "it is astonishing how a keen brain like your own can guess another's secrets! I also make a claim to humble intelligence enough to have guessed your wishes in this matter, but, alas, I can be of no service to your majesty. I grieve to add, neither can anyone else be of service."

"What? She is dead!"

"Oh, not so bad as that. But she is gone."

"Gone—where?"

"To her own country—back to that America of which your majesty has heard her boast so freely."

"How do you know this, my friend?" demanded Michael.

Sachio smiled. "Who should know better?" said he. "Let me confess. We took yonder young lady a prisoner and carried her away with us; but we could not hold her as such. Indeed, we no longer hold any quarrel with Gretzhoffen and there was no longer a question of prisoners as between the two kingdoms. This young lady was seen to take ship."

"At what port?"

"At ours, your majesty. Her astonishing ingenuity enabled her to escape from our guards. Like Catiline of old, she has escaped, she has evaded, she has broken forth! And a good riddance of her, so say we all!"

"All, my good Sachio? I am not so sure. How shall I rid my memory of her eyes so beautiful, her hair so lovable, her figure—her so charming and delicate figure? Fortune does not often repeat such favors. We may not expect to see her like again at any early date."

"That is as it is," said Sachio, pretending to heave a vast sigh of sympathy. "But what can we do? She took it all into her own hands, and by this time is well on her way to America. There is not the slightest doubt regarding either her departure or her destination—she was rather bold about it, in fact, and made no secret of her plans."

"Was she a spy, think you, Sachio?"

"Without doubt, your majesty, and I well rue it that she did not receive the punishment fit for a spy. True, she was beautiful—"

"Yes, yes!" assented Michael. "Such eyes, such a figure—think you that she will return?"

"I truly hope not, your majesty," returned Sachio fervently, and for once he spoke the truth, even on the chance of offending this amorous king.

CHAPTER LXV.

The Unknown Countries.

What now of those to whom Count Sachio had so lightly given carte blanche to oblivion? Certainly there was left behind them no trace or clue which could give a hint of the extraordinary circumstances now enmeshing them. They might all of them, Kitty, Count Frederick, Roleau, as well have been dead indeed and sunk at sea, so far as any hint of their fate was concerned. They had vanished from the earth. The ship that bore them had vanished from the water as well.

It was a strange and unreal country which faced Count Frederick when he found solid land under foot once more. He turned to life and its happiness only with a dull apathy, a lagging interest.

Frederick did not note that the faithful Roleau had become separated from him in the confusion following the landing of the boat. In truth, Roleau, exhausted as he was, himself had noted but little of what had gone on. Finding himself finally left practically alone, he made off down the beach in search of food and water, while meantime Frederick was accompanied by a party of natives up the beach and into the village which served as headquarters for that portion of the island. Here he was brought before the chief. From the look of him and his subjects, Count Frederick fancied himself to be on an island somewhere off the African coast.

Whether these people were friends or foes he could not tell at first, for he understood neither their language nor their gesticulations, but it occurred to him that whichever they might be it would not be amiss for him to impress them with a feeling of his own power. He could not tell whether or not they were familiar with the effect of firearms, but recalled all he had read of the terror inspired in savage minds by the use of such weapons. He drew from his pocket the pistol which he had carried, and looked about him for some object at which to aim.

A wild duck was floating in the lagoon not far away, and at this Count Frederick took careful aim, and fired—with the extraordinary good luck to kill it outright. This feat brought out a most ludicrous activity amongst the natives. In consternation they flung themselves before him, clasped his knees, and laid their foreheads upon the earth even as Man Friday had in the presence of Crusoe of old. Obviously they were not disposed to curry favor with him now, and not to attack him. As for himself, possessed only of such ammunition as remained in his single cartridge clip, he assumed such an attitude as he fancied would best display him as a conqueror—although in truth he felt himself far from such.

They led him through the village to a place where he was offered food and water—both now imperatively craved by his starved body.

Unable to understand what was desired of him, and indifferent as to the meaning of the colloquy going on about him, for some time his interest in life and its affairs was so lax that he paid no attention to anything that was happening. At length, however, he noticed something which caused him to take a sudden and eager interest in his surroundings.

Two men came running, evidently from a distant part of the island and evidently bearers of news of some importance, as could be proved by the reception given their hurried story. But what was that story?

There is a certain virtue in necessity itself. There is a certain common denominator in human emotions. There is perhaps a certain unrecognized common denominator in human expression of human emotion—some universal language, whether of word or gesture, or of the unspoken telepathic quality of the mind itself. Count Frederick understood not one word of this language which he heard, yet he knew—because he must know—something of the subject which these persons were discussing.

WAR NEWS OF ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

A German submarine sank the British cruiser Hermes in Dover straits. Germans gained ground at Ypres, repulsed French counter-attacks, claimed a "regrouping" of forces in the eastern theater, which Russia described as a "rout," and said the fighting there was not yet decisive.

A repulse with severe loses to the Russians on the San and Styri rivers and the interning of 649 Russian officers and 73,179 Russian soldiers up to Oct. 28, was claimed by Austria.

Russia claimed the Austro-German plan to break the Russian center, failed and that Russians were advancing on the East Prussian front. The Allies Turkey to explain her bombardment of Russian ports. The Russian fleet attacked Turkish warships in the Black Sea. England prepared to protect Egyptian possessions.

France reported slackening of the German offensive between Dixmude and Nieuport, and Allied gains north of Ypres and between La Basse and Lens.

Berlin denied the modification of the offensive, but admitted that Austro-Germans evacuated Russian Poland before fresh Russian troops. The German cruiser Emden sank a small Jap steamer. Japan's land and sea force bombardment of Tsing-Tau continued.

Premier Botha defeated Gen. Beyers, thus giving the Boer rebellion in South Africa a setback, England said.

CONFERENCE HOPES TO SAVE 34,000 LIVES

Anti-Tuberculosis Workers of North Atlantic States Meet to Help 175,000 Suffering Consumptives.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 1.—For the purpose of discussing way and means to save 175,000 people now suffering from tuberculosis in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia, the North Atlantic Tuberculosis Conference, representing these states, will meet here on Thursday and Friday of this week. The conference is called by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, the New York State Charities Aid Association, and the New York State Department of Health.

According to a statement by Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, president of the conference and State Commissioner of Health of New York, out of 332,000 deaths from all causes in these North Atlantic state, 34,000, or one in every ten, are caused by a single disease, tuberculosis. "While records of actual living cases are not available, due to lack of proper registration, based on experience in various parts of the country, there are at least 175,000 consumptives in these five states and the District of Columbia," says Dr. Biggs. "Out of every 100,000 people in this territory, 145 are dying annually of this preventable disease. Such a record of needless economic loss and suffering is to be deplored."

The sessions will open Thursday morning. Among the important topics to be discussed are "Tuberculosis and the Working People;" "The Diagnosis of Early Tuberculosis;" "Tuberculosis Visiting Nursing;" "Tuberculosis Dispensary Methods;" "Tuberculosis Hospitals," and "Open Air Schools. Gov. Whitman of New York, will address the Thursday evening session. Among other prominent speakers will be Homer Folks, New York; Dr. Lawrason Brown, Saranac Lake; Frederick L. Hoffman, Newark; John B. Andrews, New York; Dr. Haven Emerson, New York, and Dr. Victor G. Heiser, Manila, P. I.

SHERLOCK SUBMITS TO AN OPERATION

(By U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

New York, Oct. 30.—Sherlock, terror to fleeing burglars and one of the most efficient police dogs on the canine staff of the New York police department, submitted quietly to a painful operation a few days ago under the new "twilight sleep" method. Sherlock never whimpered or showed a disposition to bite, although he was not unconscious.

Sherlock suffered a bruise on his ear while chasing a burglar about a month ago, which developed into so bad a cyst that the dog, valued at $1,000 seemed unfit for further service.

The operation, according to Dr. Alfred Oberle, of the Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, who performed it, appears to be highly successful and Sherlock will be back on duty in a few weeks.

This is not the first time "twilight sleep" has been used on animals by the society. Horses, dogs and cats alike submit quietly to major operations without having their vitality impaired by the usual anesthesia. Dr. Oberle is convinced that "twilight sleep" will be of considerable benefit to veterinary surgery.

Dr. Oberle has performed major operations on horses in "twilight sleep," the horses standing up, not hobbled or restrained. Without the "twilight sleep" the operation would have been exceedingly painful.

HOLDING GRAIN FOR BETTER MARKET.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—Less than 1 per cent of the gigantic grain crop of the Northwest has reached the market. Four million bushels less grain has been marketed thus far this year than at the same time last year.

Lumber dealers report an unparalleled demand for cheaper limber, and this coupled with low grain receipts, grain gamblers say, means that the farmers of the Northwest are holding their grain. That the farmer is prepared to hold his grain until he gets $1.25 a bushel for it, is a statement often heard.

FAIR PLAY—THAT'S ALL

In plain words the Woman Suffrage movement is a plea for a square deal. In a man's world the fellow who does not believe in the square deal, and live up to it, does not stand very high.

If you had no vote, how would you feel about it?

Well, that is the way the women feel about it.

Everybody is going to benefit by women suffrage---the men as well as the women. But if there were no arguments in its favor other than the single one. THAT IT IS BUT SIMPLE JUSTICE, that one alone ought to secure the vote for women in a state where the standard of intelligence is as high as it is Pennsylvania.

The suffrage amendment is Number One. Vote for it before you turn to "the ticket."

FORMING OF RESERVE ARMY BEGINS.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Today Uncle Sam is supposed to come into possession of the nucleus of his much-discussed reserve army. The reserve army plan went into operation three years ago today. All those men who then enlisted may, at the discretion of their commanding officers, be placed in reserve from this date, which means that that there will be a steadily increasing number of men placed in the reserve army from this date on. According to the law a man may, at the end of three years with the colors, go into reserve if his commanding officer approves of his so doing. At the end of four years with the colors he must go into reserve unless he re-enlists for active duty. The man who has served three years goes into the reserves for four years, and the four-year service man becomes a reservist for three years. It is the man who has served three years who are now eligible to become reservists.

GREAT LAND CASE TO TRIAL.

San Francisco, Nov. 1.—The six suits of the United States government against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Kern Trading and Oil Company and the Associated Oil company for the possession of mammoth land holdings in Kern County, were called for trial in the United States District Court here today. The combined cases are regarded as the most important ever tried in the local Federal Court, involving as they do the momentous question as to the title to 100,000 acres of land, valued at billions of dollars.

The trial will be the first onset between the government and the Southern Pacific, various oil operators and lessees on the question of alleged fraud in securing patents from the government under the laws of congress in aid of the construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

The Southern Pacific secured the disputed lands through seventeen patents under a grant by the government. In the six suits, which have been brought in the last two years and are now consilidated in order to save time and expense, the United States alleges the patents were obtained by fraud as the railroad people were aware the sections selected were mineral bearing, but took oath the lands were agricultural.

It is the desire of both sides in the case to have the title to the disputed lands settled for once and all. In the event of victory for the present holders business will no longer be disturbed. If the government wins, the plans of the navy department for the exploitation of the properties for oil for warships will be immediately put into effect.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young!. Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scragly and thin. Mixing the Sage tea and Sulphur recipe at home, thought, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of mess.

While wisky, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

8 O'CLOCK CLOSING IN ONTARIO

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 1.—On and after today every licensed bar in Ontario must be closed at 8 o'clock in the evening, except on Saturday, when they will be closed at 7 o'clock as heretofore. The new restrictions were decided upon by the cabinet as being for the best interests of the province while the war continued. Many hotel proprietors declare the early closing will force them into bankruptcy.

DRASTIC MEAT INSPECTION RULES GO INTO FORCE TODAY

Washington, Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—New and drastic meat inspection rules, for protection of the American stomach, are in effect today. Their operation began officially, yesterday, but packing houses and abattoirs were not affected until today.

Destruction of diseased animals by U. S. meat inspectors before they enter the slaughter house is one of the new rules. Heretofore effected animals were slaughtered on the same killing floors with healthy animals and were not condemned until later.

Violation of the meat inspection laws is made punishable by a new penalty of withdrawal of government inspection, putting forth the offending concern out of interstate commerce.

A new rule in favor of the packers is that permitting them to sell "second class" cooked meat, providing it is so labeled after sterilization. Sale of raw pork in summer sausage and other forms for eating without cooking is prohibited.

Drastic new sanitary regulations for slaughter houses is another feature of the new regulations in effect today.

EXTRA EDITORIAL

Voters of All Parties Favor The Republican Ticket

Hundreds of voters in Clearfield county who normally vote another ticket have indicated their intention to support the Republican ticket at the election tomorrow. This is particularly true of those independent citizens who owe allegiance to no party, and who habitually cast their ballot for the best man. Their vote will be solid for the Republican candidates, because the men on that ticket are clean and capable, and worthy of their support.

Indeed, personal fitness might well have been made the slogan of the campaign this year, for each individual candidate can honestly declare that he is fit, mentally and morally, for the office for which he is running.

Al Kline, who heads the ticket, it one of the most lovable men in the world. He is exactly the kind of a man that men tie to and swear by. His political opponents have on occasion sought to use against him the fact that he is not brilliantly educated. Well, sticking to that text, no brilliant educational attainments are required for the office of county treasurer, and if Kline is never the recepient of an honorary degree, he has all the learning required for the job—and more. Of ineffably more importance is this fact: Al Kline is honest clean down to the ground—an inherent qualification which no amount of schooling will give a man.

Ed. B. Chase has been in business in Clearfield all his life, and has earned a reputation for sterling integrity and efficiency which stands him in good stead in the present campaign His record has been gone over with a fine-tooth comb, but his political enemies have been unable to find a single thing in it which might disqualify him for the office of register and recorder. Indeed, an eleventh-hour attack on the whole Chase connection was the only weapon used against him in the campaign, and that was both scurrilous and false.

When a man has an official record for his friends and enemies to scan, he doesn't need to go very far behind that. Every man in the county knows John H. Moore's record as prothonotary, just as they know that John H. Moore is an honorable and capable gentleman. He has asked for a second term on personal fitness, and there is not the least doubt in the world that he will be given it.

Dale and Spencer measure up in fitness for the office of county commissioner heads and shoulders above their opponents. Both are trained business men, and if elected will give the county a business administration not unmixed with intelligence.

John M. Bain and T. E. Moore, candidates for county auditor, are both trained men. They know what an audit means, and how to audit. Theirs will be the duty to prevent wasteful expenditures of the county's money by exercising watchful care over the accounts of the disbursing officers. It is no child's play, and these men will fully serve the interests of the county if elected.

There you have it. There is not a single man on the ticket who is not worthy in every particular of the confidence you will show in him. These men were selected from the long list of candidates in the September primaries. The Republican party vouches for them, as did the individual voters in the primaries, and it is clearly the duty of every Republican voter to go to the polls tomorrow and pile up a big majority for them.

WILL EUGENIA KELLY WED?

New York, Nov. 1.—Will Eugenia Kelly, daughter and heiress of the late Eugene Kelly, the millionaire banker, become the wife of Al Davis, cabaret dancer and entertainer? This is the question that now seems uppermost in the minds of the habitues of Broadway restaurants and other resorts in the white light district where both Miss Kelly and Mr. Davis are well known. This is the day that Mr. Davis's divorce from his wife becomes effective and the first day that he is legally free to make Miss Kelly his bride. According to a report published late in August, Miss Kelly was quoted as saying that she intended to marry Mr. Davis. Later she denied this. Friends of the couple, notwithstanding this denial, believe their marriage will take place at an early date, notwithstanding any obstacles that may be placed in their way by Miss Kelly's mother, who once had her daughter arraigned in police court in an effort to break off her friendship with the cabaret dancer.

ANDERSON CREEK HILL SCENE OF SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Ralph Jordan and Two Sons Narrowly Escape Death Saturday Afternoon

Motorcycle Becomes Uncontrolable and Plunges Over Embankment—Mr. Jordan in Hospital Suffering From Bruises—Two Sons Badly Injured.

Ralph Jordan and two sons, Randolph and Chancey, had a narrow escape from serious injury and probably death Saturday afternoon about 4:30, when Mr. Jordan lost control of the motorcycle in which they were riding, causing it to leave the road and plunge through a board fence and over an embankment.

Mr. Jordan and two sons left Clearfield about 3:30 and while coming down the Anderson Creek hill on their way home the brake broke resulting in the accident. There were two alternatives for stopping the machine open to Mr. Jordan. One to run it into the bank at the side of the road and the other to take a chance on clearing the curve at the foot of the hill. On account of the children he chose the second but while crossing the railroad near the foot of the hill, the front wheel swerved, causing the machine to go over the embankment.

Mr. Jordan was badly injured, having the first point of one of his fingers broken and the bone piercing the palm of his hand. He was immediately taken to the hospital where 1500 units of antitoxin were given him, the doctors being afraid lock jaw would set in as a result of the bone being exposed to the air so long. He was also injured in his hip, back and side, but is resting as well as can be expected today.

Chauncey, the older son, was badly bruised about the face and hip and is complaining of pains in his chest and stomach. It is not known yet whether he is injured internally. The other boy was bruised about the face but is able to be around today

One of the largest and most fashionable social affairs of the season was held at the home of A. W. Lee, Sr., Saturday, from 3 to 7 o'clock, when Miss Mary Lee, Miss Ella Goodfellow and Mrs. Asbury Lee, Jr., entertained more than 200 guests at a reception in honor of Miss Marian Bigler, whose wedding will take place on the tenth of this month, and Mrs. August L. Moore, who was formerly Miss Lillie Lee.

The house was most artistically decorated in autumn leaves, bitter sweet berries, laurel, yellow chrysanthemums and jack-o-lanterns. The color scheme which was carried throughout the entire house was yellow and undoubtedly the decorations were the most beautiful which were ever displayed in Clearfield. Thayer's orchestra from the Susquehanna College of Music furnished delightful music during the entire afternoon and evening. Delicious refreshments were served by the ladies of the Episcopal Gild.

The out of town guests who were present were:

Mrs. A. E. Patton, Mrs. C. S. Russell, Mrs. Chas. E. Patton, Mrs. William C Helmbold, Mrs. Augustus Wolfe, Mrs. Roland D. Swoope, Miss Mary Swoope Mis Kathryn Dyer, Miss Ruth Thompson, Mrs. McKinley, of Curwensville; Miss Mary Fryberger, Miss Muriel Spencer, Miss Mary Riddles, Mrs. William C. Hudson, Riddles, Mrs. Wm. France Admits She Has Shot 2 Women Arrested As Spies

Denies That Either Case Is Similar to Murder of Miss Cavell, as Victims Were Caught At Espionage

RECORDS IN CASE SHOWN TO U. P. MAN

Paris Nov. 1. (By United Press.)—France makes no secret of the fact that she executed two women spies. As stated in a cable Saturday the two incidents have been refused discussion by the French government from the standpoint of comparison with the Edith Cavell affair.

The French government freely places before the United Press the records in both cases giving full authority to publish them. They bear no similarity to the Cavell incidents, according to the French records in which the prisoner was accused only of helping French and Belgians of military age to escape from German jurisdiction and not with any act of espionage.

The women executed by the French were found guilty as spies. Their names are Ottile Boff and Arguerite Schmidt.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE MOST IMPORTANT ISSUE TOMORROW

Five Good Reasons "WHY WOMEN SHOULD VOTE" Are Given Below

A great question is being discussed
While wispy gray faded hair is
Shall women vote or not?
I think they should.

First: Because you will find a great many more educated women in Pennsylvania than educated men. In almost any High school in Pennsylvania you will find more girls than boys.

Second: As women must obey the laws just as men do, should they not have a say in electing the men who make the laws?

Third: Would men be satisfied if only women chose the officials who were to regulate their business? Of course they wouldn't, so why are the in Pennsylvania at the present time. only men regulate their business?

Fourth: If a man is willing to trust a woman with his name and money surely he is willing to trust her with the vote.

Fifth: Men say that women have nothing to do with war. It is only just to give women a voice in the government and in the councils that make or prevent war. Who love and work to rear the sons who are then killed in battle? Who must suffer agony for every soldier killed? WOMEN! They suffer not only mentally but often physically as well.

Sixth: Is it not significant that no attempt is being made in any equal-suffrage state to take away the vote from women FOUR MILLION women vote in THIRTEEN equal-suffrage states why can't Pennsylvania be the FOURTEENTH?

Seventh: Men say that women will neglect their homes and children if they vote. Women aren't any more likely to neglect their homes and children than men are to neglect their business.

I think the real objections to women having the vote are founded purely on prejudice. SURELY NOT ON REASON.

"If you think she knows as much
As the steerage Turk and such,
Let her vote.
If you think she has a mind
Equal to the Turkish kind
Let her vote.
If you think she's earned the right
That you grant without a fight
To the Servian bedlamite
Let her vote.

If you think she is as good
As the burglar brotherhood,
Let her vote.
If she's more deserving than
Any bum or hold-up man,
Let her vote.
You don't bar out the thug,
Or the Anarchiatic bug,
Or the gin-mill ugly mug,
Let her vote.

If you think that she is just,
And is worthy of the trust,
Let her vote.
If you think her heart beats true
For the right, its up to you—
Let her vote.
If you think she's earned her way,
Don't be stingy with the pay,
Let her have her little say,
Let her vote.

CLEAFIELD HIGH LOSES TO STATE COLLEGE HIGH

Came Very Disheartening to Coaches —Team Shows Poor Form and Head Work

The football game Saturday afternoon in which Clearfield was beaten by State College by a score of 13-0 was very disheartening to the Clearfield coaches and rooters. There are no excuses to offer except that the team had on off day all around. They lacked pep, fighting spirit and aggressiveness, and on the whole showed very poor head work and form.

The season will reach it's climax next Saturday when the team goes to DuBois to play their old rivals. The game will decide whether the season is a success or a total failure. Although at home the team shows real form and science, they fall down when playing on some foreign field as was shown in Saturday's game.

State College made their first touchdown by straight football, carrying the ball over through the line, but the second one was on a fumble by Clearfield. State College kicked from their 60 yard line to West who fumbled the ball and a State College man recovered it and crossed the line for their second tally.

Twice during the first quarter, Clearfield was within the ten yard line but lacked the punch to shove the ball over. After these two failures the team became discouraged and lost their pep and fighting spirit and accepted their doom.

MONDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 1, 1915

Tomorrow's duty is plain to all good Republicans and Progressives. Vote the ticket straight. Don't be a "plunker."

Getting near to hog killing time again. We suggest taking the finger prints of the porkers at the county home.

The fifty dollar appropriation for licking the editor seems to have been expended on booze as a preliminary to the grand event.

That champeen hen of the North American's, Lady Eglantine, need never bother herself about cackling. Every time she lays an egg, the old N. A. tells the whole world about it.

The Reed attack on the Chase family has lost Dick many a Democratic vote which ordinarily would have been cast for him. A vote for Chase for register and recorder will not only help to put a good man into office, but will rebuke unfair campaign methods.

It does not seem odd that local Democratic papers seek to create the impression that there is a "split" in the county Republican organization. A party so completely wrecked as the local Democracy must have some comfort even if it is gained by giving currency to falsehoods.

It is plainly up to Clearfield to make the latest effort of the Women's Club a success. The town has been begging for a rest room for the benefit of out of town shoppers and visitors. Now it has one, thanks to the willingness of the ladies to "take a chance," and it is the duty of the town to make it a success.

Bob Mason is on the job again to save the Republican party from the demnition-bow-wows. Bob's got his pencil all sharpened up, and is prepared to record each and every vote that he hears about. Incidentally Bob wants The Progress to say that he knows no more about the other two pigs than he did about the two he was supposed to have swiped.

All that is necessary to send the whole Republican ticket under the wire is for all Republicans to go to the polls tomorrow and vote the straight ticket. Conditions were never better for a complete victory, and every man should feel it a duty to cast his vote without permitting petty personalities to influence him. The ticket is good as it stands, and is worthy of full support.

We commend the Bowman advertisement on this page to the thoughtful attention of Progress readers. Its effrontery is strictly in keeping with the brazen attempt of Mr. Bowman to pursuade the voters that his record entitles him to another whack at the county commissionership. If he is judged solely upon his record as a commissioner, he will not poll enough votes to get himself into the official count.

Thankfully, the women of the state are not going to be disappointed because a few rum-soaks and traffickers in vice oppose their efforts to secure the franchise. Nobody expects that class to support woman suffrage, but there are enough clear headed men in Pennsylvania to make Amendment No. 1 a law tomorrow. Vote for suffrage. It is the cleanest opportunity you ever had to go on record for progress.

GLASS WORKERS GET MORE PAY.

Kane, Pa., Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—Scores of window glass plants, shut down for months, were to reopen in Western Pennsylvania today on completion of wage negotiations. Five thousand employes will receive increased pay.

YALE NOW IN "DRY" COLUMN.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 1.—Yale University has been put in the "dry" column by a new law which was put into effect today, and which absolutely prohibits the clubs and fraternities at the university from serving alcoholic beverabes to their members. The reason for this is that many of the members of the clubs are minors and the law forbids the selling of liquor where minors congregate.

MORE "PREPAREDNESS."

Washington, Nov. 1.—In pusuance of an order of the war department a board of cavalry officers met at the Army War College here today for the purpose of revising and bringing up to date the cavalry drill and service regulations of the United States army.

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

"Cyprus is one of the most important islands in the Mediterranean," says a bulletin given out today by the National Geographic Society, which describes England's reported offer to the Greeks for their aid in the world-war. "There are just two islands in the broad inland sea larger than Cyprus, and these are Sicily and Sardinia. There are few islands in the world more rich in historical associations, and none, probably, more coveted by a powerful neighbors.

"The island lies in the mouth of a formed by Asia Minor and Syria at the northeastern end of the Mediterranean, being about equally distant from the mainland to the north and to the east. It has an area of 3,584 square miles, or is as large as the states of Delaware and Rhode Island combined. Its greatest length is 141 miles and its greatest width is 60 miles, while its average width is more than 35 miles. A great part of the island is taken up by the two mountain ranges, one of which fills much of the southern and central part, and the other of which stretches along the northern coast.

"The coast of Asia Minor lies 40 miles to the north, and that of Syria between 50 and 55 miles to the east. Although nominally a possession of the Ottoman Empire up until the outbreak of hostilities between the Turks and the Allies, Cyprus has been administered by Great Britain since 1878, and now forms an integral part of the British Empire. English occupation has done much to improve the conditions of health on the island, as it has been a stimulus to commercial development.

"The mountains of the island are wild and beautiful, and upon their sides the forests are still growing that were famed and prized in early Egyptian times. They also contain the mines of copper, celebrated among the ancients and still richly productive. The highest altitude is attained by Mount Troodes, with a summit 6,406 feet above sea level.

"A wide valley runs, east and west, through the central part of the island. This valley is about 60 miles long, with a breath varying from 10 to 20 miles. The mountain ranges on either side send their waters to the valley through intermittent torrents. Much of this lowland is uncultivated, though in the northern parts grain is grown. The soil of the whole valley is good, and there is no reason why the uncertain water supply might not be supplemented, bringing all of the land under cultivation. In the days when western civilization was in its swaddling clothes, Cyprus was widely known for its impassable forests, which not only clothed the sides and summits of its mountains with thick, dark masses of green, but which overgrew the whole floor of the valley between with such an interlacing sturdy tangle of trees and underbrush, that it was difficult to clear the land for cultivation.

"The wonderful forests of the land, however, in the more than 2,000 of exploitation that have passed over them have been almost entirely cut away. These forests built the ships of Egypt, of Greek Syrian rulers, of Asia Minor cities, and of Turks, and all that remains of their once much-heralded glory are the pine growths on the mountains. Today the whole central plain is bare and treeless, and with the extinction of the forests many disadvantages of climate have come upon the island, so that Cyprus of the present is not the bright home for man so bravely praised by the Greeks of classic times. It is, nevertheless, a valuable land, and much of its former splendor could be brought back to it by the proper administration and development. The English have already begun this work of rehabilitation.

"The population of the island is estimated at 240,500, Greeks and Turks. The chief towns are Nicosia, the capital, with 15,000 inhabitants, the largest city, and Limasol and Larnaca. Most of the people gain their livelihoods by agriculture. The methods employed are almost as ancient as are the traditions of the islands, and the inhabitants are sturdily opposed to innovation. The olive, mulberry, grains, grapes and other fruits, oil seeds, cotton and all sorts of vegetables are grown. Irrigation works have been undertaken for the reclamation of the soil, so fruitful of old, and many acres have been brought back under cultivation. In passing, it may be stated, that the miles of Cyprus have found favor in all of Britain's wars since that waged against Russia in the Crimea.

"Cyprus does a annual trade of about $1,500,000. It is handicapped in the development of its commerce owing to a want of natural harbors and to an Eastern fatalism too thoroughly learned to permit of much initiative. Since the British occupation some energy has been brought into the little land, but there still remains a great deal to be accomplished before a west-Europa commerce and business management can become indigenous. Great Britain administers Cyprus through a high commissioner, with the powers of a colonial governor."

OFF YEAR ELECTION IS BEING HELD IN JERSEY.

Trenton, Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—Interest in the off year election in New Jersey which occurs tomorrow centers mainly in the fight for control of the next legislature, which on joint ballot will elect a state treasurer. A Democrat, Edward E. Grosscup, the present treasurer, is chairman of the state Democratic committee.

In the next legislature there will be the making and breaking of booms for governor and United States senator, offices which are to be filled in 1916.

WON'T TALK SUFFRAGE, PEACE OR RELIGION.

San Francisco, Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—Women of every race and creed; women of every walk of life, suffragists and antis, neutrals and belligerents, unfurled here today the banner of mutual tolerance.

Under the auspices of the International Congress of Women, these delegates from almost every land on the globe opened their six-day convention, under an iron-clad agreement not to talk suffrage, peace or religion. There was, however, plenty of talk.

Church women, Red Cross and charity workers, society women, modern clubwomen, foreign women were here. Pan-American day will be one of the big features of the congress. The women will try to establish more of an entente cordiale between the women of North and South America.

"We are going to see if we can not overcome prejudice between the Latin American and the Anglo-Saxon American," explained Mrs. F. H. Colburn, who is in charge. Anglo American woman (the most of her) does not smoke ... goes and comes where she ... Each hold their social ... aguinsst the other.

BATTLE STORIES TOLD BY THE MEN IN THE TRENCHES.

AFTER THE OVERTURE—THE BAYONET BALLET.

(By U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

London, Oct. 2.—(By Mail.)—"It was all right once the 'curtain was rung up'" said a wounded Tommy, formerly a call-boy in a London theater. "It was the all-night wait for the order to advance that I found most trying. The incessant thunder of the guns and the shrieking of the shells in the darkness overhead was a most nerve-racking overture to the big drama to come.

"It was my first real battle. I knew my part well enough after months of rehearsals in England, but I own I felt a trifle shaky, just like an actor on his first night. But it's strange how all this feeling passed away when some one cried, 'Ish kabibble, now's your chance!'

"My chum and I had agreed to stick together as long as we could, but no sooner did we clamber out of the trench than he went down. I seemed to go mad with rage at this. I hardly know what I did.

"Suddenly I lost all fear. I was carried along by an overwhelming impulse to get at the Germans and avenge my chum. Leaping over the parapet, I rushed [illegible] dead bodies and barbed wire as though I was electrified. I was bowled over at the first trench. I remember plunging by bayonet into a huge German who confronted me with leveled rifle. Then I was hit on the head with something that made me see more fire than during all the time I had been out there.

"Next thing I knew the stretcher-bearer was telling me my wound was not very serious."

TOMMY HELPS A WOUNDED GERMAN.

(By U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

London, Oct. 2.—(By Mail.)—The young corporal had lost his left arm at Loos. "But it was worth it," he observed from his bed in one of the London military hospitals. "You know, we had been waiting a long time for 'the day.' The night before the battle we had a little concert. One of our lads, made up as Lady Tippitz, sang 'I wouldn't leave the old canal for you.' Early next morning we were in the thick of it. We were like a menagerie let loose.

"One of our fellows did a wonderful thing. Set upon by a dozen Boches, one by one he knocked them all out. Then I saw him pick up a wounded German officer and [illegible] him across his shoulder. While carrying the officer he was hit. The blood poured from his head, but he staggered on with the German until he could lay him down in a place of safety.

"There were many similar acts of gallantry that day. ... bravest of all were our chaplains ... stuck right with the boys even when the fighting were fiercest. ... real pluck you couldn't beat our officers. Our young lieutenant ... me up when they got me. 'How did you get on, sir?' I asked him. ... how that he had copped a big ... shrapnel and that his left ... almost severed. 'Oh, just ... my boy, he replied."

OUR SON WAS KILLED ON THE MORNING OF SEPT. 25—"

(By U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

London, Oct. 2.—(By Mail.)—All accounts from the British front—correspondents' despatches, soldiers' letters, official reports—unite in the warmest praise of the gallantry of the English officers, especially the youngsters. The story of the death of Second Lieutenant Emanuel, of Belsize Park, as told in a letter to his mother from a fellow officer, is typical:

"Your son was killed on the morning of September 25 while supporting an attacks. He was magnificent. I heard the men talking of him among themselves. They say he was leading and chatting all the time, and did them a world of good. When the order came to go to the front line his platoon was the first to move. 'Hooray! we're going up, lads; come along,' he shouted. He led them all the way and got into the trench safely, but almost immediately afterwards he received a bullet in the chest.

"He was splendid to the last, and his farewell words were: 'It is all right, oh, lads!' His example has been most inspiring to all of us."

EIGHTEENTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER LXIV.

Sachio and Michael.

The two rival capitals of these mated lands still faced one another in a conflict as yet undecided. Which were deeper in duplicity it had been difficult to say, but as to which surpassed in active measures no doubt still remained. Count Sachio, restless and energetic, already was taking further steps to enforce his own will and that of his sovereign upon the weaker mind which purported to govern at Gretzhoffen.

It was as Sachio had prophesied—the sloth of Michael left him open to any proposition which came couched in fair words and which offered no disturbing changes in his own personal plans. He acceded readily enough to the proposals of the Gretzhoffen courtier to lengthen the armistice between the two warring countries with a view to a formal and final peace. Readily enough also he admitted into his own household the archplotter of the forces of his hereditary enemy.

Unopposed, indeed invited, Sachio made his way much as he liked throughout the Gretzhoffen palace, with whose interior he already was more or less familiar. It was his plan in case of any challenge to refer to the royal ruler who was his host.

He paid special attention to that apartment where he had found the partially destroyed original script whose missing half he sought. Here, minutely, patiently, like a hound running a difficult trail, he went over the place inch by inch, seeking to find some trace which would lead him to his quarry.

But success did not attend his efforts, though these he prosecuted even in those portions of the palace where so recently he and his troops had faced death when the levels were flooded by waters turned in from the castle moats. He was willing to despair, and in fact had turned away with the intention of giving up the search, when he met a subofficer of the guard who proved difficult to handle in his usual easy fashion.

"Halt! Who goes there?" challenged this guard as he saw Sachio emerge from one of the lower chambers.

"A friend!" rejoined Sachio promptly, in military formula.

"Advance, friend, and give the countersign!" came the gruff command.

"The countersign?" said Sachio. "Ah, well, my friend, now that I think of it, I have not had it given to me. 'Twas my own neglect. But I am a friend of the king—'twas he who gave me permission to explore these portions of the palace. I was curious to see the operations of this system of defense by water—it was something new to me."

"That is all very well," rejoined the soldier, "but explanations of that sort are scarcely good enough."

"Take me, then, to the king himself," said Sachio.

"Why should I?" rejoined the other. "What business is it of yours to know about the lower levels of our palace? These are ticklish times, and there have been such things as spies."

"Spies!" exclaimed Sachio, virtuously. "I, a spy—is that what you mean, fellow? If so, I command you to carry me forthwith to the presence of the king himself. He knows me well, and you should have a care not to offend one who is under the king's protection."

The sheer audacity of this intruder had its effect, even upon the blunt soldier who had accosted him. Sachio was indeed taken to the presence of Michael, and there his bold prediction proved true—Michael reprimanded publicly the officer who had done his duty, and showed his public favor to the man who was indeed a spy, although not suspected of being one.

"What, fellow?" exclaimed the king to the soldier, when Sachio had made his explanations—"what do you mean by offering indignity to our friend and future ally in this fashion? Away with you, and do you report at the guardhouse under arrest. Your trial shall come later."

"My dear Sachio," resumed Michael, "you see how prompt we are with our protection of our friends? Do not take it ill of us that one of our underlings has done what his superior officers or his sovereign would never think of countenancing. We trust you will accept this disclaimer."

"It was nothing, your majesty," replied the wily statesman, "and I assure your majesty the incident shall not linger in my memory. May we perhaps venture to drown in a bumper to your majesty's good health all thought of this misunderstanding? I will drink to the health of Michael and the prosperity of his kingdom."

"Quite agreeable!" exclaimed Michael; "and let us follow that with another to the final and peaceful conclusion of that unhappy misunderstanding which has heretofore divided these two kingdoms."

They drank. The befuddled friends of Michael joined them in hilarity if not intelligent, at least vociferous.

"But, my good Sachio," resumed Michael after a time, "let me ask you a question. Yours was ever a keen eye for beauty, and a good scent on the trail of beauty itself. Tell me, then, what became of that beautiful young American who so lately was with us—and who, if you will allow me to say it, had so much to do with the late repulse of your forces? I have not seen her since that time—nor, now that I recall it, have I seen her friend, Count Frederick. They have been gone some days or hours. I cannot tell which measures their absence, whether clock or calendar, but I know she is not here, for every room of the palace has been searched for her, and she is not found."

"Your majesty," rejoined Sachio, "it is astonishing how a keen brain like your own can guess another's secrets! I also make a claim to humble intelligence enough to have guessed your wishes in this matter, but, alas, I can be of no service to your majesty. I grieve to add, neither can anyone else be of service."

"What? She is dead!"

"Oh, not so bad as that. But she is gone."

"Gone—where?"

"To her own country—back to that America of which your majesty has heard her boast so freely."

"How do you know this, my friend?" demanded Michael.

Sachio smiled. "Who should know better?" said he. "Let me confess. We took yonder young lady a prisoner and carried her away with us; but we could not hold her as such. Indeed, we no longer hold any quarrel with Gretzhoffen and there was no longer a question of prisoners as between the two kingdoms. This young lady was seen to take ship."

"At what port?"

"At ours, your majesty. Her astonishing ingenuity enabled her to escape from our guards. Like Catiline of old, she has escaped, she has evaded, she has broken forth! And a good riddance of her, so say we all!"

"All, my good Sachio? I am not so sure. How shall I rid my memory of her eyes so beautiful, her hair so lovable, her figure—her so charming and delicate figure? Fortune does not often repeat such favors. We may not expect to see her like again at any early date."

"That is as it is," said Sachio, pretending to heave a vast sigh of sympathy. "But what can we do? She took it all into her own hands, and by this time is well on her way to America. There is not the slightest doubt regarding either her departure or her destination—she was rather bold about it, in fact, and made no secret of her plans."

"Was she a spy, think you, Sachio?"

"Without doubt, your majesty, and I well rue it that she did not receive the punishment fit for a spy. True, she was beautiful—"

"Yes, yes!" assented Michael. "Such eyes, such a figure—think you that she will return?"

"I truly hope not, your majesty," returned Sachio fervently, and for once he spoke the truth, even on the chance of offending this amorous king.

CHAPTER LXV.

The Unknown Countries.

What now of those to whom Count Sachio had so lightly given carte blanche to oblivion? Certainly there was left behind them no trace or clue which could give a hint of the extraordinary circumstances now enmeshing them. They might all of them, Kitty, Count Frederick, Roleau, as well have been dead indeed and sunk at sea, so far as any hint of their fate was concerned. They had vanished from the earth. The ship that bore them had vanished from the water as well.

It was a strange and unreal country which faced Count Frederick when he found solid land under foot once more. He turned to life and its happiness only with a dull apathy, a lagging interest.

Frederick did not note that the faithful Roleau had become separated from him in the confusion following the landing of the boat. In truth, Roleau, exhausted as he was, himself had noted but little of what had gone on. Finding himself finally left practically alone, he made off down the beach in search of food and water, while meantime Frederick was accompanied by a party of natives up the beach and into the village which served as headquarters for that portion of the island. Here he was brought before the chief. From the look of him and his subjects, Count Frederick fancied himself to be on an island somewhere off the African coast.

Whether these people were friends or foes he could not tell at first, for he understood neither their language nor their gesticulations, but it occurred to him that whichever they might be it would not be amiss for him to impress them with a feeling of his own power. He could not tell whether or not they were familiar with the effect of firearms, but recalled all he had read of the terror inspired in savage minds by the use of such weapons. He drew from his pocket the pistol which he had carried, and looked about him for some object at which to aim.

A wild duck was floating in the lagoon not far away, and at this Count Frederick took careful aim, and fired—with the extraordinary good luck to kill it outright. This feat brought out a most ludicrous activity amongst the natives. In consternation they flung themselves before him, clasped his knees, and laid their foreheads upon the earth even as Man Friday had in the presence of Crusoe of old. Obviously they were not disposed to curry favor with him now, and not to attack him. As for himself, possessed only of such ammunition as remained in his single cartridge clip, he assumed such an attitude as he fancied would best display him as a conqueror—although in truth he felt himself far from such.

They led him through the village to a place where he was offered food and water—both now imperatively craved by his starved body.

Unable to understand what was desired of him, and indifferent as to the meaning of the colloquy going on about him, for some time his interest in life and its affairs was so lax that he paid no attention to anything that was happening. At length, however, he noticed something which caused him to take a sudden and eager interest in his surroundings.

Two men came running, evidently from a distant part of the island and evidently bearers of news of some importance, as could be proved by the reception given their hurried story. But what was that story?

There is a certain virtue in necessity itself. There is a certain common denominator in human emotions. There is perhaps a certain unrecognized common denominator in human expression of human emotion—some universal language, whether of word or gesture, or of the unspoken telepathic quality of the mind itself. Count Frederick understood not one word of this language which he heard, yet he knew—because he must know—something of the subject which these persons were discussing.

WAR NEWS OF ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

A German submarine sank the British cruiser Hermes in Dover straits. Germans gained ground at Ypres, repulsed French counter-attacks, claimed a "regrouping" of forces in the eastern theater, which Russia described as a "rout," and said the fighting there was not yet decisive.

A repulse with severe loses to the Russians on the San and Styri rivers and the interning of 649 Russian officers and 73,179 Russian soldiers up to Oct. 28, was claimed by Austria.

Russia claimed the Austro-German plan to break the Russian center, failed and that Russians were advancing on the East Prussian front. The Allies Turkey to explain her bombardment of Russian ports. The Russian fleet attacked Turkish warships in the Black Sea. England prepared to protect Egyptian possessions.

France reported slackening of the German offensive between Dixmude and Nieuport, and Allied gains north of Ypres and between La Basse and Lens.

Berlin denied the modification of the offensive, but admitted that Austro-Germans evacuated Russian Poland before fresh Russian troops. The German cruiser Emden sank a small Jap steamer. Japan's land and sea force bombardment of Tsing-Tau continued.

Premier Botha defeated Gen. Beyers, thus giving the Boer rebellion in South Africa a setback, England said.

CONFERENCE HOPES TO SAVE 34,000 LIVES

Anti-Tuberculosis Workers of North Atlantic States Meet to Help 175,000 Suffering Consumptives.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 1.—For the purpose of discussing way and means to save 175,000 people now suffering from tuberculosis in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia, the North Atlantic Tuberculosis Conference, representing these states, will meet here on Thursday and Friday of this week. The conference is called by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, the New York State Charities Aid Association, and the New York State Department of Health.

According to a statement by Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, president of the conference and State Commissioner of Health of New York, out of 332,000 deaths from all causes in these North Atlantic state, 34,000, or one in every ten, are caused by a single disease, tuberculosis. "While records of actual living cases are not available, due to lack of proper registration, based on experience in various parts of the country, there are at least 175,000 consumptives in these five states and the District of Columbia," says Dr. Biggs. "Out of every 100,000 people in this territory, 145 are dying annually of this preventable disease. Such a record of needless economic loss and suffering is to be deplored."

The sessions will open Thursday morning. Among the important topics to be discussed are "Tuberculosis and the Working People;" "The Diagnosis of Early Tuberculosis;" "Tuberculosis Visiting Nursing;" "Tuberculosis Dispensary Methods;" "Tuberculosis Hospitals," and "Open Air Schools. Gov. Whitman of New York, will address the Thursday evening session. Among other prominent speakers will be Homer Folks, New York; Dr. Lawrason Brown, Saranac Lake; Frederick L. Hoffman, Newark; John B. Andrews, New York; Dr. Haven Emerson, New York, and Dr. Victor G. Heiser, Manila, P. I.

SHERLOCK SUBMITS TO AN OPERATION

(By U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

New York, Oct. 30.—Sherlock, terror to fleeing burglars and one of the most efficient police dogs on the canine staff of the New York police department, submitted quietly to a painful operation a few days ago under the new "twilight sleep" method. Sherlock never whimpered or showed a disposition to bite, although he was not unconscious.

Sherlock suffered a bruise on his ear while chasing a burglar about a month ago, which developed into so bad a cyst that the dog, valued at $1,000 seemed unfit for further service.

The operation, according to Dr. Alfred Oberle, of the Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, who performed it, appears to be highly successful and Sherlock will be back on duty in a few weeks.

This is not the first time "twilight sleep" has been used on animals by the society. Horses, dogs and cats alike submit quietly to major operations without having their vitality impaired by the usual anesthesia. Dr. Oberle is convinced that "twilight sleep" will be of considerable benefit to veterinary surgery.

Dr. Oberle has performed major operations on horses in "twilight sleep," the horses standing up, not hobbled or restrained. Without the "twilight sleep" the operation would have been exceedingly painful.

HOLDING GRAIN FOR BETTER MARKET.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—Less than 1 per cent of the gigantic grain crop of the Northwest has reached the market. Four million bushels less grain has been marketed thus far this year than at the same time last year.

Lumber dealers report an unparalleled demand for cheaper limber, and this coupled with low grain receipts, grain gamblers say, means that the farmers of the Northwest are holding their grain. That the farmer is prepared to hold his grain until he gets $1.25 a bushel for it, is a statement often heard.

PLANS BIG HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATION.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—What New Years Eve is to Broadway and Shrove Tuesday to New Orleans, a belated Hallowe'en celebration will be tonight to Pittsburgh. Preparations have been under way for several months to make tonight's carnival the most spectacular in a decade. As Hallowe'en fell on Sunday, the celebration was set for tonight by official edict of the mayor.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 1.—(By United Press.)—The Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Free Masonry, opened its thirty-ninth annual reunion here today.

FAIR PLAY—THAT'S ALL

In plain words the Woman Suffrage movement is a plea for a square deal. In a man's world the fellow who does not believe in the square deal, and live up to it, does not stand very high.

If you had no vote, how would you feel about it?

Well, that is the way the women feel about it.

Everybody is going to benefit by women suffrage---the men as well as the women. But if there were no arguments in its favor other than the single one. THAT IT IS BUT SIMPLE JUSTICE, that one alone ought to secure the vote for women in a state where the standard of intelligence is as high as it is Pennsylvania.

The suffrage amendment is Number One. Vote for it before you turn to "the ticket."

FORMING OF RESERVE ARMY BEGINS.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Today Uncle Sam is supposed to come into possession of the nucleus of his much-discussed reserve army. The reserve army plan went into operation three years ago today. All those men who then enlisted may, at the discretion of their commanding officers, be placed in reserve from this date, which means that that there will be a steadily increasing number of men placed in the reserve army from this date on. According to the law a man may, at the end of three years with the colors, go into reserve if his commanding officer approves of his so doing. At the end of four years with the colors he must go into reserve unless he re-enlists for active duty. The man who has served three years goes into the reserves for four years, and the four-year service man becomes a reservist for three years. It is the man who has served three years who are now eligible to become reservists.

GREAT LAND CASE TO TRIAL.

San Francisco, Nov. 1.—The six suits of the United States government against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Kern Trading and Oil Company and the Associated Oil company for the possession of mammoth land holdings in Kern County, were called for trial in the United States District Court here today. The combined cases are regarded as the most important ever tried in the local Federal Court, involving as they do the momentous question as to the title to 100,000 acres of land, valued at billions of dollars.

The trial will be the first onset between the government and the Southern Pacific, various oil operators and lessees on the question of alleged fraud in securing patents from the government under the laws of congress in aid of the construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

The Southern Pacific secured the disputed lands through seventeen patents under a grant by the government. In the six suits, which have been brought in the last two years and are now consilidated in order to save time and expense, the United States alleges the patents were obtained by fraud as the railroad people were aware the sections selected were mineral bearing, but took oath the lands were agricultural.

It is the desire of both sides in the case to have the title to the disputed lands settled for once and all. In the event of victory for the present holders business will no longer be disturbed. If the government wins, the plans of the navy department for the exploitation of the properties for oil for warships will be immediately put into effect.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young!. Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scragly and thin. Mixing the Sage tea and Sulphur recipe at home, thought, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of mess.

While wisky, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.
